927 MQFL magnetic qubit function language is a specified architecture solid state specific software written language that is transformed by a function written chip that makes the written data function after written to magnetically Copyright © 2016 Christopher G Brown